and that her only home was with Foster. The girl's brother, Charles, refused to say what he would do to Foster if he came to Pemberton, but merely told friends to wait and see.

Foster In New York.

Petectives employed by the girl's father to bring her back from the Windsor Hotel, in Philadelphia, announced today that all arrangements have been made to arrest Foster the moment he sets foot in New Jersey.

Foster is in New York. In the little parlor of her father's home Miss Bradley repeated her vow of loyalty to Foster, despite the objections and pleadings of her parents. Bradley. apparently suffering from the strain he has undergone since his daughter's elopement, became angry when she re-peated her declarations of love for her former employer. Miss Bradley's pretty face was tear-stained as she told of her love. Her voice, however, did not quiver, and

fiantly from the room, "I Love Him, I Love Him."

"I love Mr. Foster as much as ever, she said, "and I want the whole world to know it. I know he will get a divorce. Then I will marry him and he will take me away from here. They dragged me from him by force in Mobile. My family kept me confined in that hotel in Philadelphia against my will. They dragged me down here and detectives pulled me from the automobile and dragged me into this house. "But I love him as much as ever, Put that in the papers and let every one know. Nothing can make me change my mind. I intend to go back to him, no matter what happens. I want to go back to him. As soon as he gets a divorce I will marry him." Several times during the course of the young woman's story her father inter-rupted. He told her the foliy of her love, pointed out the suffering of Foster's wife and seventeen-year-old daughter, the grief of her own parents. and the vast difference in her age and that of the man she has chosen to lo despite her parents. The father's pleadwas futile. The girl's eyes flashed, d merely answering "I love him," she walked from the room.

Mr. Bradley declared last night that if Foster enters New Jersey a warrant ing supervisor general, is presiding his arrest charging him statutory offense will be issued by Samuel Atkinson, prosecutor of Burington county, in which Pemberton is located. The Rev. Newton Nelson, rector of the Methodist Church, where she was a ter, of New Orleans. Sunday school teacher, has declared that the young woman need not fear that her friends have turned against Detective George Tate, who accom-panied the girl to Pemberton, conversed with her during the ride. Tate said fater that to him she declared that she would return to Foster despite any move her parents may take,
